Steel Firmly Embedded in Eye.

A difteen-year-old daughter of F. T.
Lillie, who lives on the Pownal road in Bennington, while at play a few days ago accidentally got a small piece of steel into one eye. She did not succeed in removing it and Friday she was taken to the North Adams city hospital where Dr. C. W. Might attempted to remove it, but was unsuccessful as it was too deeply embedded. The girl is to be taken to New York where by the use of a powerful magnet it is believed that the steel can be withdrawn and the eye saved.

Roswell B. Fay.

Roswell B. Fay, who died recently was a former well known resident of Williston, Mr. Fay was a descendant from the noted Fay family of Bennington. His grandfather was Nathan Fay, son of John Fay, who was killed at the battle of Bennington. He was born in Richmond July 5, 1808, being the oldest of a family of eight children, only two of whom survive him. In the year 1838 he purchased the Eli Chittenden farm on the banks of the Winooski river in Williston, on which farm he resided for nearly fifty years. While a resident of Williston he filled many offices of honor and trust. In the year 1850 and 1851 he represented his town in the legislature in 1860 and 1861 was elected judge of probate for Chittenden county. He was a Universalist and ever a zealous worker in thee hurch of that denomination at Williston. In 1886 he moved to Oakland, Cal., to pass his last remaining years with his son, Alfred C. Fay. His wife. land, Cal., to passhis last remaining years with his son, Alfred C. Fay. His wife, Ann Cutler, died May 1, 1870. Of his amily of five children, two only are living, Alfred C. Fay, and one sister, Mrs. Roxana Thomson of Oakland, Cal., survive.

Rutland May Lose Industry.

The Steward Tin Can Manufacturing Co. may leave Rutland just because some of the local property owners want huge prices for their land. J. A. Steward, one of the members of the firm, says his company tried to purchase sev eral sites in the city which would be ade quate for the location of a plant of sufficient size, but every owner approached wanted an enormous price just as soon as he found out that his land was wanted for manufacturing purposes.

One of the firm's chief difficulties, it is understood, is the fact that it has no freight siding leading directly to its plant. All efforts to obtain the necesary property rights to construct a side rack have been futile and the necessity of hanling freight to and from the fac-tory by wagon adds greatly to the ex-penses. If land for the company's deelopment could be found, it is said that would develop into a large industry. At present it is making automatic can ning machines for the sardine industry in Maine and has a rush of orders from this point alone which are hard to fill. The canner is the invention of J. A. Steward: Beside this patent he holds about a dozen others. All of the canning machines which the company turns started. Its principal business formerly was the manufacture of tin cans for maple syrup, but it has gradually drifted into the manufacture of canning machines for all branches of that industry. out are patented by it. It has been in It now employs about thirty men and It now employs about thirty men and has a weekly pay roll of about $300.
